our workshops

01 community

What is community? Northside's vibrant history centers on what many neighbors call the "four pillars": home, school, business and church. Students hear stories about the community, create a mural and have the opportunity to visit Northside and experience first-hand the abundance of community life.

02 freedom walk

What makes people rise up against injustice? In this popular workshop, students hear the voices of Northsiders who led the local Freedom Movement, learn freedom songs, and design freedom signs. In a follow-up field trip, students visit sites where students planned sit-ins and marches.

03 oral history

A In this two-part workshop, students learn the why's, what's and how's of oral history and engage in exercises to develop active listening skills. Students will then apply their skills by interviewing one of our Community Mentors, Northside elders who lived through segregation and the civil rights movement.

about

Learning Across Generations is a dynamic curriculum designed to enable young people to take up the legacy of Chapel Hill's Northside community and invites students of all ages to learn the history beneath their feet.

At the core of our educational work is the Community Mentor Team, a group of senior educators and civil rights leaders committed to teaching by telling their life histories. Mentors ignite interest in history and make powerful connections with students as they share memories of struggle, resilience, and hope.

04 hidden hill

This workshop for middle and high school students takes a critical view of Chapel Hill's reputation as a liberal town by highlighting the lives of African-Americans who fought for equality and justice. Hidden Hill feature audio and visual sources and a spoken word performance linking past and present.

05 citizen/action

Designed to introduce high school students to current issues facing local communities of color, this workshop (offered in 1-3 sessions) focuses on the question: What does it mean to be a citizen? Students meet community activists in Chapel Hill and have the opportunity to visit an historically African-American community in which activists live and work for social justice.

06 story studio project

An innovative approach to cultivating community leadership among diverse, local middle and high school students, this 8-week workshop series takes students on a journey sparked by the stories of Chapel Hill's civil rights movement. Story Studio is designed to inspire students to develop their own visions for social justice by collaborating to create original works based on photo and audio recording and editing.
